Welcome note

In an era marked by increasing global challenges—from armed conflicts and geopolitical tensions to the devastating impacts of climate change and emerging threats to public health—safety has become more uncertain than ever. Natural disasters, pandemics, technological risks, and social unrest continue to test the resilience of communities worldwide. At the same time, injuries remain a hidden epidemic, affecting millions of people through road traffic crashes, workplace hazards, violence, and unintentional harm.

Preventing injuries requires not only strong public health policies but also a culture of preparedness—one that integrates risk assessment, timely intervention, and resilience-building across all sectors.

EU-SAFETY 2025 will bring these critical issues to the forefront. This year's conference will take place from 30 September to 2 October 2025 at the Cultural and Conference Center of Heraklion, Crete.

The main theme of the conference, “Preparedness for the Unexpected,” reflects our commitment to advancing proactive strategies, evidence-based policies, and cross-sectoral collaborations that enhance resilience and readiness in times of uncertainty. The conference will serve as a platform for knowledge exchange, the sharing of best practices, and the promotion of action toward a safer and more sustainable future—where injury prevention and safety are embedded into every aspect of policy and practice.

EU-SAFETY 2025 will showcase the latest research, innovative interventions, and policy developments in injury prevention—covering areas such as child injuries, falls, home and leisure accidents, occupational injuries, and transport-related trauma.

In addition, we will place strong emphasis on quality of care, patient safety, and equitable access to life-saving interventions. Special attention will be given to the development of comprehensive trauma care systems, strengthening health sector preparedness, and the critical role of rehabilitation and ongoing care—ensuring that survivors of injuries can reintegrate into their communities and enjoy an improved quality of life.

Your participation will help shape a shared vision for safer societies, foster meaningful collaborations, and translate scientific knowledge into action. We warmly invite you to join us in Heraklion, Crete, for this unique gathering of professionals, policy-makers, and advocates dedicated to injury prevention and the promotion of safety.

We look forward to welcoming you to EU-SAFETY 2025.

Dr Maria Papadakaki

Chair, EuroSafe Executive Board

President, EUPHA Injury Prevention & Safety Promotion Section

Organizers

Laboratory of Health and Road Safety (LaHeRS) Hellenic Mediterranean University (HMU)

The Laboratory of Health and Road Safety, affiliated to the Department of Social Work at the Hellenic Mediterranean University, is dedicated to the prevention of injuries and the promotion of health and safety across populations. By combining laboratory-based research with field intervention, the Lab develops policies and designs and evaluates programs aimed at reducing accidents (road traffic incidents, falls, pedestrian injuries, natural disasters) and addressing violence (child abuse, domestic and sexual violence, suicide, youth violence). At the same time, it provides psychosocial services to vulnerable population groups in remote areas and supports the development of innovative educational tools and lifelong training programs for frontline professionals.

European Association for Injury Prevention and Safety Promotion (EuroSafe)

European Association for Injury Prevention and Safety Promotion (EuroSafe) The European Association for Injury Prevention and Safety Promotion (EuroSafe) is a non-profit organization founded in 1990 and based in Amsterdam. It brings together public authorities, research institutions, businesses, and civil society organizations with the aim of preventing injuries and promoting safety. EuroSafe manages the European Injury Database (EU-IDB)—the only pan-European database collecting information on the external causes of injuries from hospital emergency departments across Europe. The organization provides reliable statistical and qualitative data to support the development and evaluation of injury prevention policies, in line with the recommendations of the Council of Europe.
